Every wedding anniversary is something to celebrate, but 25 years is pretty incredible. It's time to celebrate that strong, long-lasting love with something special. But what exactly should that be? The traditional anniversary theme for 25 years is silver, so that's a great place to start. A silver watch or a beautiful silver serving platter can elegantly commemorate the day—but you also don't need to take silver so literally.

Choose gifts that come in a silvery color to give yourself more options. Or feel free to disregard the whole silver thing if you'd like—it's your day, after all! The most important thing is finding a gift your partner will love. Think about their interests or something they own that might need an upgrade—or go with something personalized for an extra-special gift.

What to Consider When Buying a Silver Anniversary Gift

- Silver Metal or Silver in Color: Celebrating 25 years is a major milestone—a quarter of a century. So, it makes sense that traditional 25th-anniversary gifts are silver—a metal that's precious, durable, and radiant. Just like your love! If you're not into heavy metals, you can still embrace the spirit of this anniversary with modern takes on silver like a silver-hued tech item or even a coffee maker.
- Personalization: A custom product can make a silver anniversary gift feel all the more personal—and it doesn't necessarily have to be silver.

For instance, a gift monogrammed with a name or initials, or a heartfelt message is an ideal choice. If you're set on the silver theme, consider an engravable serving tray or cufflinks.

- Experience Gift: If you feel like after 25 years you don't need any more stuff, then forget silver and choose an experience gift instead. For instance, a romantic dinner for two makes an excellent anniversary gift. Whether you follow centuries-old traditions or not, the idea here is to celebrate your love.

FAQ

What is the traditional gift for the 25th anniversary?

The traditional gift for a 25th wedding anniversary is silver. Some people take the theme quite literally and choose gifts like sterling silver jewelry, cuff links, a serving tray, or a photo frame. Alternatively, give your partner something that's silver in color, like a chrome coffee maker or a silvery metallic suitcase. Of course, there's no harm in breaking tradition if you have something totally different in mind.

Do I have to go super traditional for a 25th anniversary gift?

Just because it's a big anniversary doesn't mean you have to spend a lot of money or get a traditional gift. It's also an opportunity to think outside of the box and gift an experience that you both will enjoy—think a wine tasting trip, a cooking class, or a hiking adventure if you love the great outdoors.

What's an example of a silver anniversary gift that's both practical and pretty?

Gifts that serve multiple purposes (and still look great even when they're not in use) are an excellent choice. For instance, serving pieces can perform double duty as catchalls or vanity organizers. When it comes to accessories, look for items that your spouse can wear with different types of outfits, like a pair of sparkly silver studs or a simple necklace that can be dressed up or dressed down.
